What is a battery management system (BMS)?

A Battery Management System (BMS) is the electronics that monitor cell and pack voltage, current, and temperature; estimate state of charge and health; balance cells; enforce safety limits; and command charge, discharge, and contactors.

Can a BMS be used as a charger?

Treating the BMS as a charger: the BMS limits or disconnects; the charger defines the charge curve. Equating 3S with 12V LFP: chemistry and series differ--do not cross-apply thresholds or chargers. Only reading "A" on the label: ignore continuous vs peak, wiring gauge, connector ratings, and thermal rise at your peril.

Why is balancing a BMS important?

By avoiding over-stress (over/under-voltage and temperature) and restricting low-temperature charging, the BMS slows SOH drift. Balancing curbs divergence that would otherwise cap usable capacity, extending cycle life of the entire pack--not just the strongest cell.

How does a BMS reduce Soh drift?

In EVs/ESS, this reduces range loss and preserves predictable output across ambient swings and aggressive drive cycles. By avoiding over-stress (over/under-voltage and temperature) and restricting low-temperature charging, the BMS slows SOH drift.
